OVERVIEW

Do you feel like you have implemented all the evidence and are still not getting the expected results? If so, you are not alone.

Central Line-Associated Bloodstream Infections (CLABSIs) and Catheter-Associated Urinary Tract Infections (CAUTIs) remain a significant contribution to patient harm and financial losses. The problem may call for a different approach.

Quality implementation science tells us that significant practice and process variation can lead to lower quality and higher cost. It makes sustainability almost impossible. The first step in this journey is dissection of both physician and nursing practices and processes followed by application of laser target strategies.

This session focuses on key practice areas where significant variation has been identified through a national frontline consultation experience. Innovative assessment techniques and evidence-based strategies are outlined to address both insertion and maintenance related to central lines and indwelling urinary catheters. The challenge to incorporating new evidence into practice lies in altering routinized behavior and current culture to support new care practices. Leave with a plan for your organizations breakthrough to achieve zero in CLABSIs and CAUTIs.

PROGRAM OBJECTIVES

Upon completion of this program, participants will be able to:

- Analyze current practice and processes around CLABSI & CAUTI prevention using various assessment strategies;
- Compare and contrast evidence-based practice that can have significant variation and outline strategies to sustain practice; and
- Develop a plan for organizational success towards the goal of zero CLABSIs & CAUTIs

MEET YOUR FACULTY:

Kathleen M. Vollman, RN, CCNS, FCCM, FCNS, FAAN

Kathleen Vollman is a critical care clinical nurse specialist and consultant. She has published and lectured nationally and internationally on pulmonary, critical care, prevention of healthcare-acquired injuries, work culture, and sepsis recognition and management. From 1989 to 2003, she functioned in the role of clinical nurse specialist for the medical ICUs at Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit, Michigan. Currently her company, Advancing Nursing LLC, is focused on creating empowered work environments for healthcare practitioners through the acquisition of greater skills, knowledge, and process improvement. Vollman is a subject-matter expert for prevention of VAE, CAUTI, CLABSI and HAPI, as well as sepsis recognition and management and the culture of safety for the American Hospital Association and the Michigan Hospital Association. In 2012, she was appointed to serve as an honorary ambassador to the World Federation of Critical Care Nurses and is currently the financial director.
